Part 2 focuses on designing and improving the visual appearance of the Nyavhas M Poultry Farm website using CSS.

An external CSS stylesheet was created and linked to the website's HTML pages. CSS was used to improve the website's colours, typography, spacing, navigation, product sections, forms, buttons and overall page layout.

Responsive design was also implemented to ensure that the website can adapt to different screen sizes, including desktop computers, tablets and mobile phones.

The website was tested using browser developer tools to identify and correct layout and responsive design issues.

The technologies Used that are I used for my part 2 are HTML5, Css3, visual studio code, GitHub and Microsoft Edge.

External CSS Stylesheet

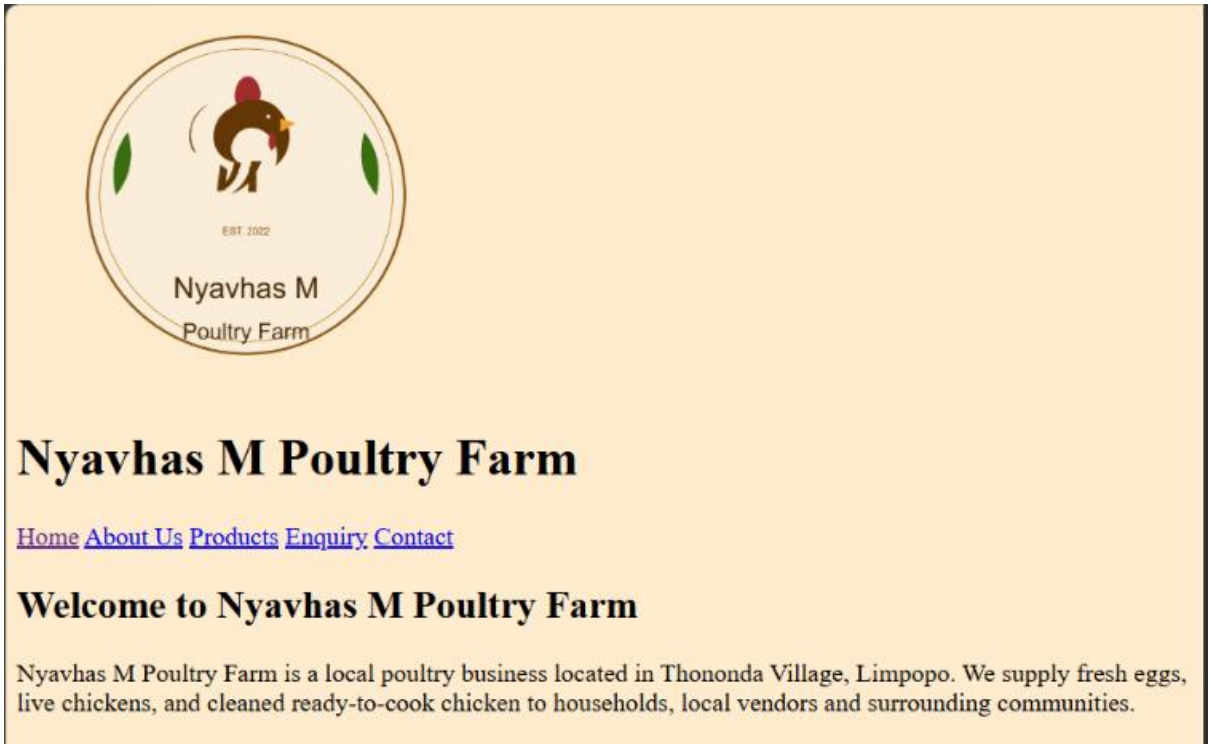

An external CSS stylesheet called style.css was created in the css folder.

The stylesheet is linked to the HTML pages using the following code:

About Us

Nyavhas M Poultry Farm was established in 2022 in Thononda Village, Limpopo. The farm began as a small home-based poultry business with the aim of supplying fresh and affordable poultry products to the local community.The business starts as a home based farming project with a limited number of chickens and continues to increase to consist of two sections focused to poultry. While the other portion raises broiler chickens for meat production, the first area concentrates on producing eggs.

Over time, the business has grown to serve neighbouring villages by providing fresh eggs, live chickens and cleaned ready-to-cook chicken. We are committed to quality, excellent customer service and supporting local households with reliable poultry products.

With consistent growth, the business now largely depends on direct customer visits and word of mouth promotion. It does not yet have an official website where customers can learn about available products, enquire about prices or contact the owner online. Developing a professional website will improve the farm's online presence, increase customer engagement and make it easier for new and existing customers to access information.
